

Hamilton Health Sciences

The City of Hamilton's 500,000 residents can take pride and comfort in having one of Canada's leading centres for patient care, community service, teaching and research in their own backyard.

caring for more than two million people

Hamilton Health Sciences is an academic health sciences centre, partnering with McMaster University's Faculty of Health Sciences to provide care to more than two million people in Hamilton and Central West Ontario. We are also home to the Juravinski Cancer Centre (formerly the Hamilton Regional Cancer Centre), a Cancer Care Ontario partner providing comprehensive cancer treatment, prevention, research, education and supportive care.

at the bedside and behind the scenes

Our 10,000 caregivers, staff and volunteers work diligently – at the bedside and behind the scenes – to help our patients and their families. We promote continuous learning, and are at the forefront of innovation and excellence in care, learning and research.

with a commitment to learning, research and excellence
