BRIAN GAMBLE is a family physician practicing in Chatham Ontario and is currently the Chief of Staff of the Chatham Kent Health Alliance. He is the lead physician for the community's regional information technology project.

Brian chairs the Ontario Medical Association's (OMA) Practice Technology Committee which has been involved with the Primary Care Reform initiative in its attempts to introduce computerized networking and the electronic medical record to physicians in Ontario. He is also currently the chair of the OMA's Section on General and Family Medicine representing the general and family physicians of Ontario. He is an MBA candidate at Tulane University in New Orleans.

CAMILLE ORRIDGE is Executive Director, Toronto Community Care Access Centre. She has served as President Patient Services Home Care Program for Metro Toronto and held the front line role of President of the Regent Park Community Health Centre. There she guided a vision that one day will see the children of Regent Park – a challenging community at the best of times – become the doctors, nurses, administrators, and community health workers who can work at its now brand new Health Centre.

PAT RICH is managing editor, WebMD. He comes to this post after a distinguished career as editor-in-chief of The Medical Post. He was known for introducing coverage of medical politics and his preference for features on subjects like medical ethics. Despite his non-confrontational style, his reputation at The Post for balance was not altered by the pressure of commerce, preferring to advance his medium's editorial integrity. This will serve him well as the internet explores its economic realities.
